Why One Domestic Man Fired Out the Census Taker.

Few Complaints to Commissioner Shields To-Day-The Work Nearly Done.

Supervisor Murray, of the Census Bureau said to an Evenino Wonld reporter this morning that over one hundred and fifty districts out of the 900 in this city had been already completed. "We expect to have the entire city enu merated by Saturday night, " he continued. "The public does not seem to appreciate the simost insurmountable difficulties our nen have had to contend against. They have found people who declined positively to have anything to do with the census, and others who treated the enumerators in the nost rude and undignified manner. "Of course, these very people have been dealt with according to law. But all the dealt with according to law. But all the trouble is ascribable to mistaken notions people in this city have imbibed from reading the newspapers.

As a matter of fact, we have encountered more opposition in this city in the taking of the census than in all the other cities of the United States.

We have faced genuine hostility from citizens about giving their pedicrees. Actibut, thanks to our united efforts, the census is so far a success. We hope to be through wish our work within the prescribed time, when we will all rejoice."

About fifty enumerators handed in their portfolios at the Census Bureau this morning. They had completed their districts.

There was a slim attendance at the fourth day's consus levee of United States Commissioner Shields. Since the investigation into the various complaints was inaugurated nearly one hundred cases have been heard and disposed of, and among all these not a single fine has been imposed.

The first victim gathered in by a Deputy Marshal to-day was Mr. Schafiman, a very excitable German who lives at 424 East Ninth street.

excitable German who lives at 424 East Ninth street.

Enumerater Edward Schmidt pushed open Schaffman's door at 9 o'clock Wednesday night and found him half buried in a washtho. laundering his family linen. Schmidt was ordered to get out and come around again during the day.

Schaffman told Commissioner Shields that his wife was sick in bed when the enumerator called.

'Vat you expect?" he added. 'I vas all alone in de house; it vas 9 o'clock; my vife vas sick, und I told him to go out und cum around in the daytime. Dot man, I did not see him before und he did not show me his sign—he had no vitness mit him from the Guvernment."

Schaffman was willing to give the required information and he left.

Mrs. Fanny Rittenberger, a buxom young woman in a cardinal suit, swore that her home is at East Cambridge, Mass., and that she was merely visiting her mother at 145 Delancer, sireet when Enumerator Hachlemer called last Tuesday.

The specific charge against her was that she told the enumberator she would answer no questions, nor allow mother to do so. She did not care for a one thousand dollar fine.

Hachlemer, the young woman said, acted

Hachlemer, the young woman said, acted in a very disrespectful manner to her aged Mother.

He kept shouting at her about her inability to understand German, and when he became so obnexious she declined to answer any of his questions. Besides, she did not think that she should be included in the census of this city, as she was here simply on a visit.

Mrs. Bittenberger was discharged, after undergoing the ordeal of answering all the required questions.

But admirers look in vain for the attractive face and figure of Miss Marion Manola as the impecunious mobleman in the opera.
Miss Manola's aversion to being photographed a la Don Cuear de Baxan is that she does not want her little ten-year-old daughter to see her mother's photograph in tights adorning every store window or shop that she may pass.
